

2009 ANNUAL REPORT

From Crisis to Opportunity

A Message From Our Leadership Team

IN 2009, Mercy Corps helped millions of families – through their own hard work – transform hunger and poverty into new hope for their children.

We provided life-changing support to poor families who have been hit especially hard by the global economic crisis that has touched us all. We also responded to disasters in Pakistan, Sri Lanka, Indonesia and the Samoan Islands.

At the beginning of 2010, we were among the first agencies on the ground after the devastating Haiti earthquake, and we are committed to Haiti's long-term recovery. We are helping shattered communities rebuild through initiatives that lay the foundation for stability and future prosperity.

In other countries where poverty, hunger and conflict hinder human potential, Mercy Corps continued to partner with the people we serve to grow more food, deliver clean water, educate children, increase community participation, prevent disease and start businesses that improve the standard of living for families and communities. Our innovative programs reached 16.7 million people in more than 40 countries.

We are pleased to share these highlights of our work in 2009. They are your stories too. It is your support that enables us to help millions of people arise from crisis and chaos, to change their lives for the better. Thank you.

How Your Support Changes Lives

In 2009, Mercy Corps provided vital assistance to 16.7 million people in more than 40 countries. Your generous support is improving life for families and children around the world. Thank you.

- Mercy Corps is helping 2,206,000 people in 14 countries combat the global food crisis through innovative programs that feed hungry people now – while making longer-term investments to prevent future food shortages.
- Mercy Corps helps hardworking entrepreneurs in impoverished countries build businesses that support their families. Our network of microfinance institutions in 11 countries serves 270,500 clients – 65 percent of whom are women.
- In the Central African Republic, one of the poorest countries in the world, Mercy Corps has educated 110,000 people in healthy hygiene practices and is providing 100,000 people with access to clean water while also teaching communities to maintain and manage water supplies.
- Mercy Corps helped 1 million farming families in 30 countries increase their productivity, raise incomes and adopt more environmentally sound practices. Our agriculture projects reach out to underserved people, with 70 percent of participants belonging to marginalized groups, including women and youth.

Women Lift Entire Communities

Mercy Corps has seen the power of women who succeed, whether in school or farming or business. Successful women improve their own health and well-being – and also provide food, education and health care to their families. Ultimately, their progress benefits the entire community. That's why Mercy Corps is fighting hunger and poverty by investing in women. We invite you to meet four women who are transforming their lives.

SRI LANKA

Kanthi Doubles Her Crop

Kanthi is a widow who relies on the harvest – and a small shop – to sustain herself and her two daughters.

Since attending a Mercy Corps training to learn intensive rice cultivation, Kanthi has doubled her yield. Now she can send her children to school and repair her home. She feels good about feeding her children the nutritious organic rice. And she saves money by using it as seed for next year's crop.

Kanthi is just one woman, but she's making a big difference in her community. In a country that has had to import rice, its staple food, she is demonstrating the benefits of intensive cultivation so others can learn, grow more rice and flourish as she has.

CONGO

Dafroza Constructs Cookstoves

When rebels attacked her village, Dafroza fled with her six children. Now residing in a displacement camp, she's literally saving lives. Women who venture from camp to forage for firewood are greatly at risk of attack. Mercy Corps taught Dafroza to construct cookstoves, using mud, sand, water and rocks, that consume half the wood traditional campfires require. Now she's teaching other women how to make fuel-efficient stoves.

In a place where violence and humiliation are rampant, and handouts the norm, women cherish the dignity that comes from solving a problem. Dafroza and her friends are proud to build stoves that make it easier for women to cook for their families, help save Congo's ravaged forests and, most importantly, keep daughters, mothers, sisters and friends safe.

INDONESIA

Nurhayati Rebuilds Her Life

Nurhayati survived the Indian Ocean tsunami because she was gathering firewood in the hills when it struck. Her own children, and many relatives and neighbors, did not.

At first, Nurhayati could not imagine returning to her village. But Mercy Corps paid workers to clear debris and set up displacement camps where survivors received shelter materials, bedding and cooking supplies. Soon, she and others began rebuilding their homes from bare foundations.

Mercy Corps helped villagers organize a women's group and worked with local banks to improve access to loans. Five years later, businesses are up and running. Mercy Corps is now helping farmers double their rice harvest so they can earn higher incomes and better feed their families.

CENTRAL AFRICAN REPUBLIC

Fatou Starts A Business

To help her struggling family, Fatou was eager to start her own business. But she lacked capital.

So when Mercy Corps started a Village Savings and Loan Association (VSLA) in her community, she discussed the idea with her husband and decided to join. Fatou obtained a loan, purchased corn flour and sugar, and now sells the staples. With her income she feeds her family, sends her children to school and pays for their clothing and health care.

Now Fatou is encouraging other women to share their business ideas with their husbands, join community groups like the VSLA, and benefit from the credit and support they offer. She wants to see her friends become economically independent, as she has, to help their families prosper.

Change Starts Here

Thanks to the generosity of our campaign donors, we opened our new global headquarters in Portland, Oregon, a facility that lets us work even more efficiently. You can visit our Action Centers in Portland and New York City to learn more about global poverty and hunger and discover new ways to join our work to end them.

Mercy Corps Mission

Mercy Corps exists to alleviate suffering, poverty and oppression by helping people build secure, productive and just communities.

How We Work

Mercy Corps helps people in the world's toughest places turn the crises of natural disaster, poverty and conflict into opportunities for progress. After meeting the most urgent needs, we begin working to help families recover and gain long-term stability and prosperity. Driven by local needs, our programs provide communities with the tools and support they need to transform their own lives. Our worldwide team of 3,700 professionals is improving the lives of 16.7 million people in more than 40 countries. For more information visit mercycorps.org.

Microfinance Network

Financial services are an essential part of Mercy Corps' integrated approach to help people build secure, productive and just communities. We help the poor develop their financial identities, both at the micro and macro levels, through retail and wholesale products and services. To do so, Mercy Corps has established microfinance institutions (MFIs), structured loan guarantee programs, built capacity in existing MFIs and created service organizations to contribute to the overall development of the microfinance industry.

As of 12/31/09, our MFI network has disbursed 1.7 million loans worth $1.75 billion. We currently have 272,000 active clients, 64 percent of whom are women. The 12 MFIs in our network are listed at right.
