A message from our CEO

For communities around the world facing deepening humanitarian crises, 2024 was a devastating year. Now, new emergencies and rising uncertainty are placing millions of people who are already pushed to the brink by crisis in even greater peril.

But no matter how challenging the future seems, we must not lose sight of what's possible when we take bold action together. I believe we can continue to have a significant impact, because I have seen our teams' lifesaving work—and the inspiring change we've created just in the last year.

Only through the collective action and unshakable commitment of our global teams, partners, and donors, were we able to make this meaningful impact. Mercy Corps makes the most of every dollar we receive—and we prioritize meeting the very highest standards of efficiency, accountability, and transparency.

Where conflict has forced people to flee their homes, we delivered sheltering supplies, food, and livelihood support. We supported communities in growing their resilience to recurring disasters like flooding and drought—increasing both recovery and preparedness in anticipation of future threats. And we connected people to clean water, nutritious food, new opportunities, and pathways to a more peaceful tomorrow.

These stories of positive impact highlight both our team members and the communities who work every day to improve their lives. For me, they serve as a reminder of the values that bring us together and that each of us is part of shaping the future we share.

Sincerely,

598,000

› people in DRC supplied with clean water

Responding amid emergencies

As conflict and extreme weather upended communities across the globe, our team responded with supplies and support to help people survive in emergencies. In Nigeria, where historic flooding devastated crops, homes, and critical infrastructure, Mercy Corps quickly responded with cash and food assistance to affected families—crucial to helping them meet immediate their needs.

IN GAZA

Overcoming the challenges of being displaced and living through six months of conflict, our team reopened a program providing mental health support for young people.

IN UKRAINE

Mercy Corps provided support for communities and grants to business owners—like Statislav who rebuilt his flour mill and hired others who had been displaced by the ongoing conflict.

IN SUDAN

As ongoing conflict plunged communities into crisis and extreme hunger, our team adapted existing programming to help families secure the food, medicine, and supplies they need most.

Violence forced millions of people from their homes and wreaked havoc on livelihoods and communities, and our teams and partners in Gaza, Ukraine, and Sudan delivered relief to those who are surviving day-to-day. In addition to providing food, shelter supplies, and cash assistance so people can meet their immediate needs, we work to support communities recover and reclaim their hopes for the future.

Building lasting resilience

Instability and disaster weaken critical infrastructure, threaten lives and livelihoods, and force millions of people to leave their homes in search of safety and better opportunities. That's why Mercy Corps partners with communities to innovate and implement long-term solutions and prepare for extreme weather emergencies.

IN ETHIOPIA

Through public-private partnerships, our team helped provide access to sustainable electricity for families forced from their homes by conflict and their host communities.

IN SENEGAL

Diesel-powered irrigation is expensive for farmers like Ngouye. With support from Mercy Corps to install solar generators, she's cutting costs and gaining reliable access to water.

IN GUATEMALA

A farmer with over 20 years of experience, Miguel trained with Mercy Corps and connected with accurate weather forecasts to triple his harvests.

Programs like these, developed alongside communities who face severe challenges, improve access to clean water, nutritious food, and give people an opportunity to safely live their lives. Our partnership and collaboration are what make immediate, reliable, and sustainable progress possible, helping communities across the globe strengthen their long-term resilience.

In Amman, Jordan, workers packed 1,300 food kits that were flown to Egypt and trucked across the border into Gaza for distribution.

Our unwavering determination

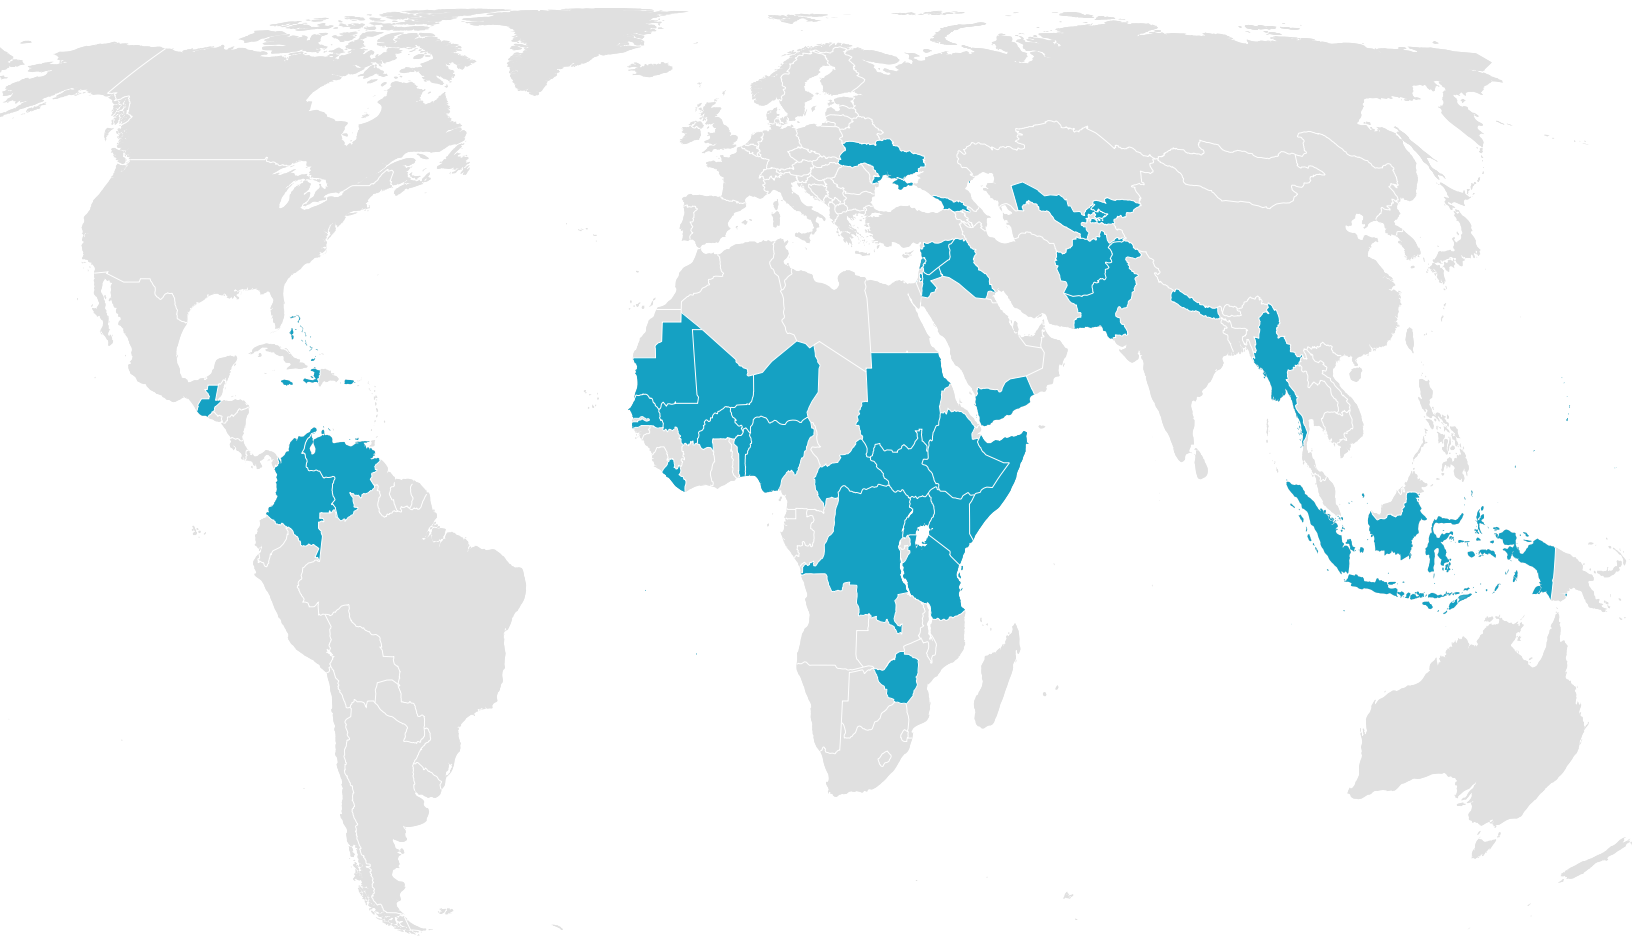

As crises and hunger continue to escalate, Mercy Corps is focused on taking action in this moment and helping communities prepare for what comes next. In Syria, Haiti, Lebanon, Gaza, and Democratic Republic of Congo, where conflict continues to increase food shortages and threaten livelihoods, our teams are committed to delivering lifesaving aid for affected communities and families who have been forced from their homes.

What's next is up to all of us. Over the last five years, Mercy Corps has used 86% of our resources to directly fund programs that help people in need around the world.
